Governor McSweeney is to be commended for his action in refusing to pardon W. F. Pons, who was convicted of bigamy in Barnwell county.

Governor McSweeney has had a number of applications for pardons since he went into office, and in most cases he has wisely refused to grant them.

"Our baby was sick for a month with severe cough and catarrhal fever. Although we tried many remedies she kept getting worse until we used One Minute Cough Cure—it relieved at once and cured her in a few days."

Remarkable Rescue.

Mrs. Michael Curtain Plainfield, Ill., makes the statement that she caught cold, which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physician, but grew worse.

He told her she was a hopeless victim of consumption and no medicine could cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption; she bought a bottle and to her delight found herself benefited from first dose.

She continued its use and after taking six bottles found herself sound and well; now does her own housework, and is as well as she ever was—Free trial bottles of this Great Discovery at Thos. Black's and Bamberg Pharmacy. Only 50 cents and $1.00, every bottle guaranteed.

TRIALS AND TRIBULATIONS OF YE EDITOR AND YE PRINTER.

An O'er-rue Tale in a Vernacular That is Intelligible Even to the Uninitiated Lay Reader.

TERTIUM QUAERITUR IN JOURNEY.

The Horse, to quote the Devil's terse ejaculation, had really "busted her traces," and she had smashed the single-tree of the Wagon as well.

The Printer examined the parted traces, which were of very rotten leather, and surveyed the fractured single-tree, which was of very brittle ash wood.

The Printer fished a very dull and rusty knife from his pocket and made an attempt at repairing the damage. He is not much of a worker in leather, however, and he met with exactly the success which his ignorance deserved.

The Printer's right, Specks—spit her out. "Ye'll feel better fer it."

The Printer stopped suddenly, and savagely wondered if the knife would enable him to rid the world of the Devil grinnin', finally suggesting:

"Dat's right, Specks—spit her out. Ye'll feel better fer it."

Black Wagon, but the latter had immediately deserted his post and was decouring with greedy eyes the photographs of some rather scantily dressed "cigarette girls" in the window of a cigar store on the other side of the street.

The Horse, left to herself, and no doubt remembering Her Owner's parting injunction about the "twelve ears of corn, and all the hay and fodder she can eat," was making straight toward the open doors of a nearby Livery Stable!

S. Y. LOVE. [To be continued.]

A Letter From Dr. Brown. Mr. Editor:—Will it surprise you if I keep my promise? Be thou then surprised.

It gives me unbounded pleasure to be able to state that Sumter is still here. You going away—your hegin, so to speak—gave us quite a shock, and for a time things were confused and unsettled; but reaction has set in, and the wheels of empire now work without a jar.

The dispensary is still open, daily, the mayor keeps up his diurnal oppres, the bank collectors still oppress the poor, and all things remain as they were from the foundation of the world.

In fact, things are a little more so than they used to be. Our city fathers are paving Main street with rocks and stones, some of our citizens are erecting new homes, and the big cotton compress plant is occupying the whole lower end of the city.

Railroad tracks belt us in on all sides, and a man cannot now get out of Sumter with ease without running over a freight engine and a string of cars. They tell me this is a sign of enterprise. I guess it must be so.

If the Filipinos ever attack this town, we can easily surround it with freight trains, and so construct a barricade against the swarthy foe.

I still pay my visits to the "place from which you went out from." The vase is broken, but the scent of the roses and other things hangs around it still. The "other things" I need not name in this communication.

You will recall them in hours of silent meditation. Your old place is now occupied by a new man. He is somewhat an improvement on the old order of things, and wears his honors gracefully.

Your little brother with the sweet auburn hair still roams the streets daily, playing with the boys and eating too much dirt, I think. I have tearfully admonished him against this evil practice; but all to no avail.

"Dry Joe" has gone into mourning since you left, and declares that he is lamenting your early demise. I am sure he thinks you are dead. You may rejoice to know that there are tears here over your early grave.

I am strongly thinking of becoming an adjunct editor of some county paper, and here and now I offer my services to you. I am certain I can furnish the reading matter in the way of news, if you can furnish the financial pabulum.

I cannot expend my genius for nothing. Even now, as you know by a sad experience, there is too much unwieldy genius in this sublimary sphere. I cannot afford to aid and abet in the crushing out of the main forces of the world.

I am willing to furnish any amount of genius, if you, or some other editor with less sense, will furnish the due and constant reward. Please put this notice in some prominent place in your paper, and authorize those in need to draw on me for all they can use.

You must be diligent to maintain an upright walk in your new home. Bamberg used to be a part of Barnwell, and Barnwell, in my younger days, was the hub of the world. I can remember the time when I felt like shedding tears whenever I saw a man who did not live in the county of Barnwell.

In those days, there were none other than "first families" in all that section. Every man was a nobleman, and every woman a princess. The boys, also, were all blue-blooded, and could sow down more devilment to the acre than could be harvested in many years afterwards.

Those boys that I wot of have now become men. Some of them are in the pulpits, some in the stores, some on the farms, and a few, who got genuine justice, are in the jails. But their blood was blue, and when they stumped their big toe on the sidewalk, they left a trail that resembled indigo.

As Dr. Rice, of Denmark, would say, this also is a parable. Sumter, S. C. [We are glad that our friend has kept his promise, to write us a letter, and we hope to publish much more from him. But as to the "financial pabulum," while there may be plenty of blue blood in Bamberg county, there is not a superabundance of the root of all evil.

However, we hope that our financial pulse will beat stronger before long. We want Dr. Brown to come over to see us, and incidentally deliver his famous "Courtship and Matrimony" lectures. Not free, however. We have spoken to several gentlemen about it, and if our friend will come we guarantee him a full house—the first time. Of course they'll never let him come back to deliver another lecture. That's the beauty about hearing Dr. Brown: you never want to hear him but once. He is all satisfying, and one of his lectures will last the man with average brains a lifetime.

The reason of this is that he will give you something to think about the balance of your days, and when old Father Time visits you, be it early or late, he will find you still thinking thoughts (if you can do such a thing) about that lecture. Seriously, however, if we can prevail on the Doctor to do so, we want him to come over some time the latter part of next month, to deliver that lecture for the benefit of some worthy cause. What say you, Doctor?—ED. HERALD.]

ARTESIAN WATER IN DEMAND. They turned into the Cannon's Bridge road, drove on past the convict camp, and over the new road built under Supervisor Keane's supervision (this road, by the way, being a vast improvement over the old thoroughfare, for it is high and dry, although on this occasion a trill rough and hummocky), and, crossing the Edisto river, were on the soil of a foreign county.

The Orangeburg roads are not the best in the world, and the Bosses' Fast Horse was painfully slow. As they proceeded, the Sun, growing hotter every minute, climbed steadily up the east-on slope of heaven's dome, and the Printer made frequent but ineffectual thirst-appealing requisitions upon the jug of artesian water.

It was half past nine o'clock when they entered the suburbs of Orangeburg City, and had the horse nearly frightened into a Fast Trot at sight of one of those ridiculous cars which ply upon the street railroad connecting the city and the railway depots.
